Asia-Pacific Association of Agricultural Research Institutions

APAARI was established in 1990 at the initiative of Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and most of the National Agricultural Research Systems (NARS) of the Asia-Pacific region

Its mission is to promote the development of National Agricultural Research Systems in the Asia-Pacific region through facilitation of inter-regional, inter-institutional and international partnerships.

Agricultural Research for Development (AR4D) in the Asia-Pacific region is effectively promoted and facilitated through novel partnerships among NARS and other related organizations so that it contributes to sustainable improvement in the productivity of agricultural systems and to the quality of the natural resource base that underpins agriculture, thereby enhancing food and nutrition security, economic and social well-being of communities and the integrity of the environment and services it provides.

The diagram illustrates the APAARI platform. At the center is a large orange circle containing the text: "APAARI Acts as neutral platform for strengthening of AR4D through innovative partnerships among stakeholders". Surrounding this central circle are six green rounded rectangular boxes, each containing a function of the platform, connected by a dashed black line. The functions are: "Building Research Partnerships" (top-left), "Regional Research Networking" (top-right), "Human Resource Development" (middle-right), "Information Dissemination" (bottom-right), "Technology Transfer" (bottom-left), and "Policy Advocacy" (middle-left).

The organizational chart of APAARI shows a hierarchical structure. At the top is the General Assembly, which leads to the Executive Committee. The Executive Committee leads to the APAARI Secretariat. The APAARI Secretariat then oversees three main areas: the Asia-Pacific Agricultural Research Information System (APARIS), AR4D Programs & Networking, and the Asia-Pacific Consortium on Agricultural Biotechnology (APCoAB).
